Government Internship Award

Paul A. Volcker Government Internship Award: Frequently Asked Questions

1. Who is Paul A. Volcker?

Paul A. Volcker was one of America’s most revered public servants. He committed most of his working life to the public good. In founding the Volcker Alliance, he expressed a desire to “empower the public sector workforce to solve the challenges facing our nation.” He set forth a vision of a public sector workforce with the experience, preparation, and commitment to ensure that government is accountable and delivers with excellence.

In the course of his career, Mr. Volcker worked in the United States federal government for almost thirty years, culminating in two terms as chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System from 1979 to 1987, a critical period in bringing a high level of inflation to an end. In earlier stages of his career, Mr. Volcker served as undersecretary of the treasury for monetary affairs during the early 1970s, a period of historic change in international monetary arrangements. Upon leaving public service, he headed two private, non-partisan Commissions on the Public Service, in 1987 and 2003; both recommended a sweeping overhaul of the organization and personnel practices of the United States Federal Government. His last official role in government service was as head of the President’s Economic Recovery Advisory Board, established by President-Elect Obama in 2008 to help steer the nation through the Great Recession.

2. Why did the Volcker Alliance create this internship award?

As stewards of Mr. Volcker’s legacy, we seek to inspire others with his story and champion his passion for public service in the next generation. We know that internships are critical to entering and advancing in careers, but they are often inaccessible due to being unpaid or low paying. Recognizing these systemic barriers, the PAV Government Internship Award provides financial support to open the door to rewarding opportunities in local, state, and federal government for NextGen Service students. We also aim to raise student awareness about the range of opportunities a career in public service offers, including mission, impact, job security, and pathways for career advancement.
